Frisky Dingo

http://mpurcell89.blogspot.com/

Google

Most Visited | H2O Playlists | Sub with Bloglines | Bookmark on Delicio... | http://www.nytimes.... | http://www.typepad... | http://bccenglish.w... | My Delicious | KENKEN Puzzles – N...

Google | Writing good | Search | Bookmarks | PageRank | AutoLink | AutoFill | Send to | Writing | Settings

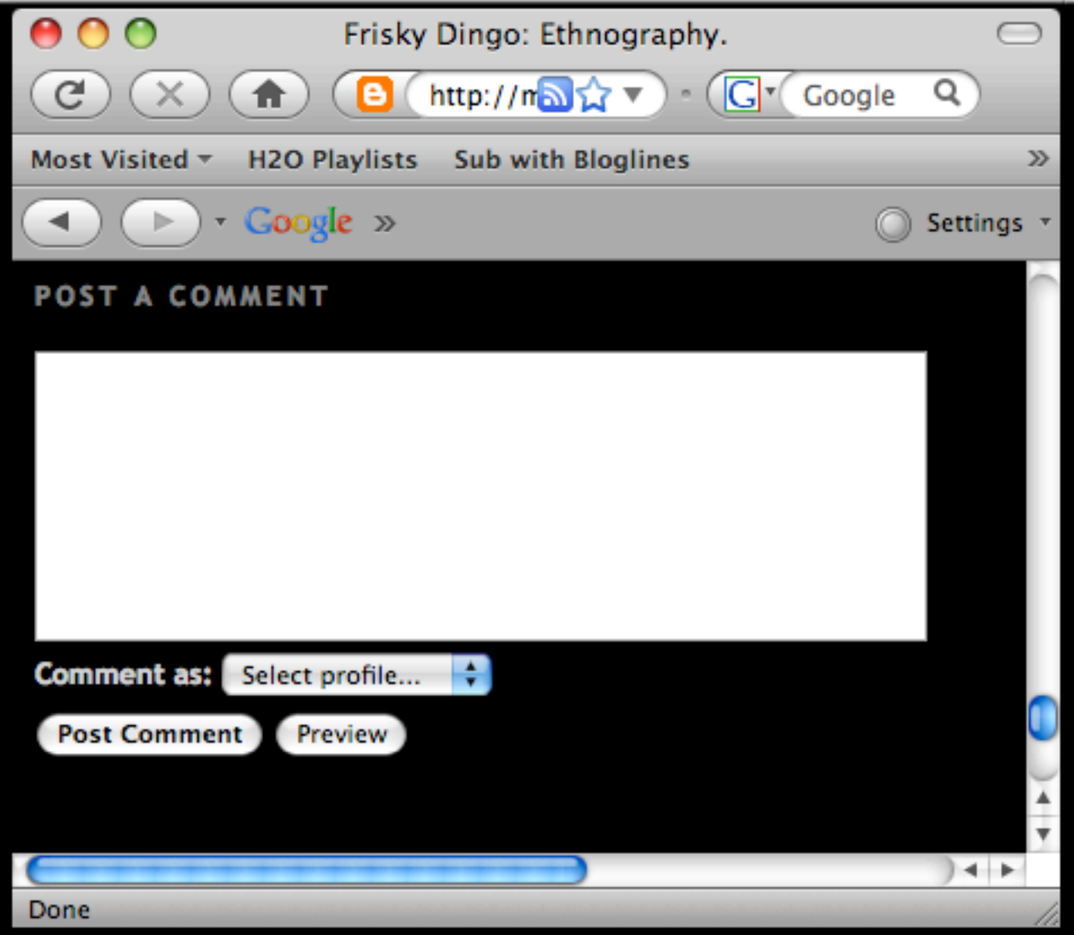
Edit Post – Re: Thinking, Teachi... | Frisky Dingo

The fish keeping forum experience.

I'm not really sure what people think of a forum, nevermind what they think of a fish keeping forum. This one is like any forum; it has all of the same components that make it what it is. The people on the forums are the ones who make the forum the way it is. You have a wide variety and demographic. In the next coming paragraphs I'm going to take you for a ride through the ins and outs of Monsterfishkeepers.com by explaining some of the groups of people who make what it is.

I would like to start off by introducing myself, I am crenipterus svenagalus, my username comes from a mixture of two of my favorite fish' names. Crenicichla Sveni and Polypterus Senegalus. I mixed the two names to be unique, a lot of usernames on this site are Latin names of fish, but only one is a mixture of two. I have been an active member of Monsterfishkeepers.com since June of 2007. The website was recommended to me by a friend so I could ask questions and get answers and not bother him anymore. I guess sometime before I started using the site I bothered him frequently for his knowledge.

When I first started on the site, I was considered a n00b. A n00b is someone who typically uses awful grammar, asks dumb questions that



Done